US Presidential Election

The first presidential debate between Donald Trump and Joe Biden was marred by regular interjections and contempt for the moderator. However the debate was anything but presidential, with the candidates instead slandering one another in place of policy discourse. Figure 1 indicates that on average short-term uncertainty around US elections is negligible, with both US and AU indices rallying after. However as shown in figures 2 and 3, discounts appear to widen when the incumbent political party loses (blue denotes Democrat victories and red Republican). Taking into account the current polls and Trump's recent COVID scare, could this mean discounts in the LIC sector will be exacerbated once again to record lows? Another dislocation between discounts and portfolio returns may present an attractive opportunity for new investors post November.

CLF Hits a Premium

After trading at a persistent discount to its pre-tax NTA, Concentrated Leaders Fund (CLF) has achieved a new milestone in light of the recent Wilson Asset Management takeover bid. Using the 9 October closing share price of $1.12, the fund is trading at an indicative premium of 6.7%. This now represents a rare exit opportunity for shareholders who also received a $0.16 special dividend in August.
